Spring Is On It's Way!

Spring is on its way, and with it comes the NCAA Basketball Tournament, probably my favorite sporting event. I love the Cinderella teams, the buzzer beaters, and the excitement! Then, of course, there are my annual delusions of bracket grandeur. Let's just say you don't want my help on brackets... But, I do have a tip to share that's a bit more serious.

It's the end of the game and as you look around you quickly see first, that you're the most sober one in your group, and second, they shouldn't drive. So you step up. What you do next though is where folks can make a mistake. Don't compare yourself to someone who's been drinking as you decide whether you should drive. Compare yourself to someone sober. That's the standard police use, and it's all about the standard. So, enjoy the game, absolutely take care of your buddies, just don't put yourself in harm's way in the process.

I hope you never need our help, but please keep our number in your telephone. If you or someone you believe in has been arrested for a DUI, please call us right away. The Reynolds Defense Firm—We're solid, we're here if you need us and we are very good at what we do.

The Day I Rubbed Dan Patrick's Belly

Have you ever done something that seemed fine at the time, but when you think about it later you kind of cringe?

The Day I Rubbed Dan Patrick's Belly

So here I am watching the taping of the Dan Patrick radio show – for those who don't know of him, Dan Patrick is pretty big in the sports world – he has a nationally syndicated sports radio show, is a television host for NFL shows, and, generally speaking, he is the cool guy in the room that everyone wants to hang out with. I don't know why he came to Portland to do his show, but he did, and I had the chance to watch him.

After the show was done, there was a photo op—get your picture taken with Dan and his crew. So I did. There was a line, and it was kind of rushed, so this wasn't really the 'hanging out with Dan' moment I had pictured in my head. After the picture was taken and the next person was walking up, I turned to shake Dan's hand—but, as you can see from the picture, he had his arms around his co-hosts. So I looked him in the eye, said thanks, and rubbed his belly.

Nic Perry's role of Director of Operations provides critical behind the scenes support and direction that allows our business to run smoothly and efficiently. Nic recently moved to Oregon after growing up and attending college in Missouri. His MBA, along with a diverse set of business skills, allow him to be an integral part of the continued growth of Reynolds Defense Firm and ensuring we provide fantastic service for our clients and a great place for our employees to work. He brings with him 10 years of experience working to help organizations grow and improve, and along with an ability to think critically, he has fantastic technical skills. He and his wife are enjoying exploring the Oregon outdoors with hiking, rock climbing, and snowboarding. In his free time, he enjoys tackling new projects like woodworking, working on cars and building websites.

Watch out for Friendly Pours!

Tip #2—Watch out for friendly pours—Pitchers can be a fun way to share watching a game with friends and economical too, just be careful, pouring and re-pouring can make it hard to keep track of how many drinks you've had. When you let someone else refill for you, you may not have finished the beer that you already have, so while you're thinking you've only had 1 pint, you've actually had more than that. This may be fine if it only happens once, but over the course of the evening, the friendly pours can really add up. So make sure if you're planning on driving later that only you are the one in charge of how much you have to drink.

What's New with Me and My Own

Just like in the movies...

"This team beat us by thirty points earlier this season, but I think we can beat them if we play a little better defense this time."

That was the start of the coach's pre-game speech to the eleven kids, including Jack, right before the last basketball game of the season. Out of the eight-game season, they lost the first five games. Then, somewhat magically, the kids became a team and they were riding high on a 2-game win streak going into this last game. But still, thirty points...

And they did it! In a Hollywood-story way, with their lead scorer going down with three minutes left, Jack's team rallied to win. Thinking about that now still makes me smile!

At the end-of-season pizza party, the coach gave out the player awards. Jack didn't receive 'best defensive player' or 'best passer' or even 'most improved' – nope, Jack was the team's 'Most Aggressive Player.' As I looked around at all the other parents and kids nodding in appreciation of the appropriateness of this award, a small, politically correct part of me wanted to cringe in mock embarrassment, but I couldn't be prouder of him - Jack didn't foul out of a game, and he isn't a dirty player at all. He just hustled, and didn't give up, no matter how big the other kid was. Thinking about that now still makes me smile too!

Client Testimonials

"Thank you to all of the Reynolds Defense Firm staff who contributed to my case and helped keep this family as together as possible. I think you're all rock stars!" -TG

"My first meeting went well, its is a very hard process to go through, but I feel like I am in good hands." - SW

"It took some weight off my shoulders meeting you and Dan. To know that a professional team is standing next to me with this gives me some peace of mind." - BR
